Greeting For Candidate's Wife

Mrs. William C. Battle Speaks Here

"Get out and get your friends involved," urged Mrs. Barry Battle Monday evening speaking to the Appomattox Woman's Club, county leaders of the Battle primary campaign and other guests at the Rescue Squad Building.

The wife of gubernatorial candidate William C. Battle, of Charlottesville, Mrs. Battle says she has "three good excuses" not to bet involved in politics, two teen-age sons and an eleven year old daughter, but that "we're involved in politics whether we like it or not."

"The fact that you're a Virginian in America" involves each woman, she said, and she urged each person present to read up on the issues, meet candidates, and vote in November.

Dressed in a pale blue short sleeve dress with matching shoes, Mrs. Battle made an attractive appearance, mixing with the crowd, shaking hands and appearing to be very much at ease.

She spoke of her husband as a candidate who in the heat of the primary and the run-off in July "never lost his temper, never lost his head."

She told of her husband's accomplishments as ambassador to Australia when the same traits served him well in handling U. S. interests in the face of a crisis between Australia and Indonesia and the negotiating of a treaty "that took a great deal of delicacy" in order that U.S. servicemen might enjoy R & R (rest and recuperation) leaves in Australia.

She spoke of the former ambassador's interest in industry, that during his stay in Australia more than $500 million in private investment poured into that country. "I saw him negotiate low frequency stations on Australian soil", she said, so that contact could be maintained with U.S. atomic submarines."

She termed her candidate-husband as "moderate" and "responsible", saying that he would work for industry to "keep our young people nearer their homes" and away from already crowded urban centers.

Concluding a day of appearances on television and radio in Washington, D.C. and Arlington, Va., Mrs. Battle appeared fresh and enthusiastic. "Elect Bill Battle for Governor", she said, "and we'll put Virginia in her rightful place as number one in the nation."

Accompanying Mrs. Battle to the meeting and reception which followed were her secretary, Mrs. Marty Milliken; Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Farrar, of Pamplin, and Mr. and Mrs. David Jones. Mrs. Farrar is county chairman for the Battle campaign. Mrs. Jones, head of the legislative and public affairs committee of the Woman's Club introduced the speaker. At 9 p. m. the Battle party departed to meet a private plane at Lynchburg Municipal Airport with William Battle on board and a return to Charlotteville.

Girl Scout Fund Drive

For the first time in Appomattox County, a Fund Raising Drive for the Virginia Skyline Girl Scout Council is being planned, according to Dr. A. A. Fatrick, Chairman for the Drive.

Girl Scouting is supported by funds received from the United Fund and from the profit on the annual Girl Scout Cooky Sale. This year, according to the proposed budget for the Virginia Skyline Council, there is a need for an additional $5000.00 in order to balance the budget.

Appomattox County, as well as approximately 16 other Counties in Council, is not in any way associated with the United Fund so never before has our County been solicited, how-

National Park historian Paul A. Hout examines the National Geographic hard-cover publication, "The Civil War" by Robert Paul Jordan. A photographer, himself, he said the book is very well done with "outstanding" photographic work.

Historian Involved In "Here-Now" As Well As Civil War Events

The historian of Appomattox Court House National Historical Park is very much involved with the "here and now" as well as historical research, writing and other duties of a national park historian.

Football, photography, free lance writing and reporting and the prospect of living in a snowy "wilderness" were only a few of the topics covered in an interview Thursday with historian Hout.

A native of Texas, Mr. Hout came here from the historian's post at Fredericks, St. Simon's Island, Georgia. He and Mrs. Hout, parents of three sons, are living at the Park in an apartment above the old Country Store.

No sooner had they moved in than Mr. Hout promptly moved one more time -- this time to a hospital bed as a victim of rheumatoid arthritis. He cheerfully explains that this is an "honorable" disease, inasmuch as General Robert E. Lee suffered the same ailment. He gives much credit to hospital personnel and to Dr. J. A. Mathews, of Appomattox, for good progress toward recovery.

As a Southerner he says he looks forward to the snowy weather with mixed feelings, never having lived this far north. In 1962 he joined the Park service as a seasonal ranger at Mammouth Cave National Park, Kentucky. This was followed by full-time employment at Kennasaw National Battlefield Park, Marietta, Georgia followed by a position at Arkansas as Post National Memorial Park Gillett, Arkansas. The Hout's youngest son, Steve, now a senior at Dumas High School, Dumas, Arkansas, and star full back, has been approached by the U. of Arkansas and U. of Georgia about next year. "He started playing when he was too young to 'tackle'," said Mr. Hout. "Yanking a hankerchief out a boy's belt meant a 'tackle' when Steve started playing," he expalined, adding that Steve has lived and talked football for ten of his 18 years, and usually with the idea of being a profession?

Transfers every two years have meant a separation of the family. Another son, Morgan, is a student at Bob Jones University, Greenville, South Carolina, and Paul A. Hout, Jr. is a police officer in Atlanta Georgia.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Hout are interested in photography and writing. Mr. Hout has been a photo-journalist with the Fort Worth (Texas) Star Telegram and with the Atlanta Journal.

His academic training includes: 54 hours of undergraduate work with the University of Texas plus graduate work at Texas Wesleyan, Fort Worth. Mrs. Hout has written articles for gardening publications, supplying photographys, as well.

Mr. Hout's professional interests in history vary with his location, In Arkansas, it was pre-American history inasmuch as the area of Arkansas Post National Memorial Park was settled in 1686, and was under Spanish rule for a time. In Georgia, it was the pre-Revolutionary period at Fort Fredericka, erected by General

Cole-Pack Approve Pilot Project-C-VA

Appomattox County's representatives on the Central Virginia Regional Planning Commission, Southside district supervisor John C. Cole and Appomattox Town Mayor, H. B. Pack, were among those voting approval for a pilot project to develop planning guidelines for rural or non-metropolitan areas throughout the United States.

Reasons for the pilot project were explained at the Sept. 25 meeting of the C. Va. Planning Commission. The Planning Research Corporation has selected two rural Virginia districts entirely different in character and stages of development in order to develop guidelines for other areas throughout the United States, Cent. Va., centered around a standard metropolitan area (Lynchburg), is one; Lee, Norton, Wise and Scott county is the other.

The project grant, according to Walter G. Hansen, vice president of Planning Research Corporation, is largely financed with Federal funds. The Dept. of Housing and Urban Development and Dept. of Agriculture are participating with the Va. Division of State Planning and Community Affairs in the development of a modern program.

At the same meeting Dr. S. A. Burnette, president of Cent. Va. Community College, spoke on the Law Enforcement Plan Implementation, a plan which the Planning Commission must approve before the college can receive grants for further law enforcement study.

The Commission approved the hiring of Nicholas R. Wreden, II, of Lynchburg, as Staff Assistant.

ABC Profits Are Divided

The annual distribution of profits from the operation of stateowned ABC stores has just been made to counties, towns and cities throughout Virginia. The funds for distribution represent an all-time high of $12,636,631, which adds up to $3.20 per capita based on the 1960 census.

Counties will receive the largest share, $6,455,098, while cities will be close behind at $5,252,417. Towns will receive $929,136.

The shares are derived from the net profits of Alcholic Beverage Control stores throughout the state.

Appomattox county will receive $24,500. The town of Appomattox will receive $3,772 and Pamplin, $994.

149 Donors

You're on the "Wanted List" if you're in good health and willing to save a life! At least 149 donors are needed on Tuesday, October 28 as the Red Cross Bloodmobile comes to Appomattox.

Tobacco Princess

Following chiffon in lime-green over matching crepe is hardly the outfit for a tobacco barn, but for a Tobacco Princess, definitely "Yes." "Miss Appomattox", Carsonette Garette, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Garrett, of Concord, appropriately enough holds golden leaves from her father's barn. This week end she will model at Miller and Rhoads Tea Room wearing an outfit in gold of her own creation. She will sing during talent competition and flash that friendly smile to the huge crown at the annual Tobacco Bowl football game Saturday afternoon. Carsonette is a contestant for Queen of Tobacconland and will be Appomattox County's ambassadress of goodwill throughout the 21st annual National Tobacco Festival in Richmond.

Dr. Pennington In Campaign

Three main topics will be dealt with by gubernatorial candidate Dr. William A. Pennington, of Buckingham during an intensive two-day round of appearances Tuesday, Oct. 14 and Wednesday, Oct. 15.

Dr. Pennington is the candidate of the Independent Party of Virginia seeking the governor's seat with Joseph Breedon, candidate for Lt. Governor.

Phil Clore, public relations committeeman for the Independents said that Dr. Pennington will be in Roanoke Tuesday making TV tapes for Channel 15, educational TV (WBRA). At 7 p.m. he will be in Martinsville at the Collinsville Shopping Center talking about the bussing of students, welfare programs in Virginia, and cigarette advertising. "He will also divulge information on state officials," Clore said, "information of great public interest."

On Wednesday Dr. Pennington will breakfast in Danville at a major tobacco warehouse; South Boston warehouse at 9 a.m.; Clarksville, 11 a.m.; and Chase City, at 1:30 p.m.

He will appear in Farmville at 3 p.m. followed by a Brunswick stew in his honor beginning at 4:30 p.m. in Buckingham.

Exciting Week For Carsonette

"Miss Appomattox", Carsonette Garrett, will have every minute filled with excitement during the 21st Annual National Tobacco Festival this week end in Richmond.

Tomorrow night (Friday) she will appear in the Grand Illuminated Parade with Peter Graves, star of Mission Impossible, as Grand Marshall. Graves, a brother of James Arness of Gunsmoke who was a Grand Marshall several years ago, will ride in the parade on Friday, October 10 and crown the new Queen of Tobacconland at halftime ceremonies of the Tobacco Bowl game between the University of Virginia and Virginia Military Institute.

Tonight (Thursday) she will appear in the Showcase at the Mosque. Star performers will include Homer and Jethro, veteran performers singing to the "Nashville Sound." On the program too will be the Ferko Wonder Bread String Band from Philadelphia, Little Johnny of Philip Morris and Eddie Weaver at the organ. Carsonette will be one of the tobacco princesses representing 11 tobacco states.

Victor Borge appeared in concert with the Richmond Symphony Tuesday evening, and other events of the two week festival have included a National Drag Race at Richmond Dragway; Junior Tennis Clinic; an elaborate Grand Ball on Oct. 4.

Carsonette and the other princesses began their arrival on October 7, all eager to vie for the crown of Queen of Tobacconland held twice by Appomattox beauties Barbara Ware Thomas and Peggy Cole, (now Mrs. Robert J. Lyons). "Miss Appomattox" of 1968, Lina Terrell was second runner-up in last year's competition.

Among the activities of the princesses are the Lions Club luncheon, talent contest at Miller and Rhoads Tea Room and President's Reception held yesterday (Oct. 8); Fashion Show at Miller & Rhoads, today (Oct. 9) luncheon at Thalhimers, Oct. 10, Parade and Parade Show, Oct. 10, with the Tobacco Bowl and Tobacco Ball, Oct. 11

Lion's Club

The Appomattox Lions Club will meet this evening (Thurs.) at Parkway Restaurant at 6:45.

A Safety Program will be presented by Mr. Luke Campbell of the Virginia Highway Safety Division.

Touring Private Schools

Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Moses, Jr. (right) and guests, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Morrison of Front Royal, Virginia, are part of a touring group visiting independent elementary and secondary Virginia schools who operate with assistance of the Virginia Education Fund, of which C. T. Moses, Jr. is president. Mr. Morrison is a director of the VEF which raised more than $1,000,000 in 1966 in donations and pledges. Beginning with a tour Tuesday of Robert E. Lee Academy, Appomattox, they planned to visit Patrick Henry Academy, Charlotte Court House, Arcadia, Rustburg, Otterburn, Bedford; plus Chase City, Clover and Brookneal Academies and Amherst Day School. Other officers and directors toured private schools in eastern Virginia with a meeting of all groups in Richmond later in the week.
